Feeling Isolated in your research ? PhD student or young post-doc ?

The RICHIE network

(Réseau International de jeunes Chercheurs en Histoire de l'Intégration Européenne)

International Research Network of Young Historians of European Integration

The RICHIE association aims to facilitate contacts between young researchers of European history. The members of its committee, PhD students and doctors from various European countries, want to overcome the isolation of young researchers through various mediums :

✷ Organising meetings and conferences

The first one took place in Paris in spring 2005, in partnership with the Universities of Paris I and Paris IV, the Institut d'Études Politiques, the Robert Schuman foundation and the CHEFF.

✷ Running a mailing list

Since it was created, it forwards both scientific (about conferences, new books, etc.) and practical information (about libraries, archives, etc.).

✷ Updating a website

Richie's website (`http://www.europe-richie.org/`) aims to host a database of researchers in European history, a bibliography, an agenda, the works of the discussion groups, etc.

✷ Creating thematic workshops

Those groups will meet periodically in the region of Paris and its suburbs to present current research, discuss recent bibliography, debate about new books, meet authors, etc. Their activities could find their way on the website of the network through the online publication of articles or the creation of discussion forums.
